Special from Monitor Bureau WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—For the first time in prohibition enforcement the Government will regulate the amount of industrial alcohol manufactured throughout the coun-manufactured throughout the country, beginning in the new years, Dr. James M. Doran, Commissioner of Prohibition, has announced.

Legal opinion on the validity of this step has been obtained from the Attorney-General's office, and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Assistant Attorney-General in charge of prohibition; is declared to be enthusiastically concepting with its pronontion is declared to be enthusiastically co-operating with it. Hitherto regulatory measures in the control of industrial alcohol have been confined merely to sale; plans are completed and will commence operation around Jan. 1 to regu-late amount of production.

The Government will decide in advance the probable amount of industrial alcohol needed by industry, and will take steps to limit production to that amount. Analysis of the situawill take steps to himit production to that amount. Analysis of the situation already made indicates, according to Dr. Doran, this amount will be between $5,000,000 and $9,000,000 gallons, as against $95,000,000 now manufactured. In the past, Dr. Doran explains, the manufacturers under keen competition have made what alcohol they could, disposing of it to the best of their ability. The Government will not step in to regulate the amount manufactured from the start. Authority to take this step, according to Dr. Doran, rests within the prohibition law.

At a meeting in Baltimore Sept. 16, before representatives of practically the entire alcohol producing industry, Dr. Doran first outlined the plans of his bureau.

Control of production "will ben-try, Dr. Doran first outlined the plans of his bureau.

Control of production "will benefit law enforcement immeasurably," said Dr. Doran.

Prefacing his statement with the information that the Prohibition Bureau has just completed revision of the regulations relating to alcohol under the dry law, he pointed out that permissive control of the manufacture, denaturization and use of alcohol is well stabilized, but added that it still lacks an essential element. This is quantitative control as against qualitative.

Failure to control industrial alcohol injures the chemical industry as a whole, he said. Accordingly control over the amount to be manufactured will be carried out and cannot be attacked "from a legal, commercial or law enforcement standpoint." various states are here on special invitation to attend the Governors' Day ceremonies. Receptions will be given by the governors at the various state headquarters immediately after the luncheon exercises this In the home department Mrs. James J. Storrow, chairman, will give a reception to invited guests late this afternoon in the restored Levi Gilbert house, more than 130 years old,

Friendly to Industrial Use

He added:
"I have made a close study of alcohol production for many years and I feel safe in saying that a control of production within known and reserved sonable commercial needs will bene-fit law enforcement immeasurably. Likewise there is no diversion of industrial alcohol that does not leave a commercial scar. I would be neg-ligent to my duty as an official and as a friend of industrial alcohol if the present situation were not squarely met. It will be my policy to constitute a quantitative control of alcohol production in the coming calendar year, that will be ample for all industrial needs and consistent the Government's interests

There were two ways in which the trustee could carry out the testator's instructions; one was to connect with the Metropolitan Water System, whose pipe line passed through the town, and the other was to build an independent system. By the legislative act that created the Metropolitan Water Board, towns and cities through which the Metropolitan pipe passes were to feeely certain advantages which made it seem advisable for the trustee to consider connecting with the Metropolitan System, but the town of Wayland favored an independent system, and the trustee accordingly set about to establish an independent water works.

By Special Cable

GENEVA, Sept. 19-The disarmament commission accepted unani-mously this morning the Polish reso-lution prohibiting wars of aggres-sion, which is a remarkable proof of the growth of sentiment against war.

The Japanese moved an amendment, the object of which was to make clear that the commission in accepting the resolution did not pply it to nonmembers of the League

Dr. Loudon regretted that his amendment denouncing recourse to any war had not been accepted, for if such a declaration were passed, the Assembly would be greatly en-couraged in the movement for moral disarmament. Nevertheless, the sol-emn declaration by 50 nations in the Assembly against aggressive war would have also great moral value, although its importance must not be overestimated.

PARIS, Sept. 19 (AP)-With loud applause and cheers from the 4000 delegates for President Doumergue, Marshal Foch, General Pershing and the national commander, Howard P. Savage, the Ninth Convention of the American Legion was opened at 9:30 clock this morning in the Trocadero Palace.

National Anthems Played President Doumergue, head of the French Republic, was the guest of honor. Members of the Cabinet, Sen-(Special) — The 175th anniversary ators, deputies, and leaders in the celebration at the First Congrega- military, naval, and diplomatic life of France occupied the platform.

Everywhere there was enthusiasm. Huge reflectors threw their light on the gathering, remarkable for its color. The "Marseillaise" and the "Star-Spangled Banner" shared honors as played by various bands, while Marshal Foch, sitting at General Pershing's left, bowed his appreciation of the spontaneous outburst which greeted his appearance. The business portion of the opening session was exceedingly brief. A committee chairmen for the after-

The commission has been investigating reports that there is apparently a Nation-wide and definite organization in the United States through which stolen goods are marketed, and that the widely differing state laws are inadequate to deal with it.

As a preliminary step, a committee of nationally known business men has been appointed by the National Association of Credit Men at the request of the commission to study practical aspects of the problem and prepare a special report, which will be the basis of further study by the standing committee on criminal codes, under the direction of Herbert S. LONDON—A victory for the workers was the comment of the Italian press on the first award of the new Industrial Court of Appeal in Rome, according to Industrial and Labor Information, the weekly organ of the International Labor Office at Geneva, which has published a resume of the case in question.

The case, according to the International Labor Office publication, was about "an agreement between the employers and workers in the rice fields concerning work for the forthcoming season, the preliminary negotiations concerning which were begun at Milan in February last, and concluded at Rome through the intervention of the national organiintervention of the national organi-zations concerned. Wages for a day's work of eight hours had been fixed at 19.50 lire, including food, valued at 3 lire, for immigrant workers and women workers, and at 18.50 and 17.50 lire, respectively, for local workers in the Provinces of Pied-mont and Lombardy, where the rice fields are situated.

Special Conditions Pleaded
"During recent months the agricultural crisis became considerably the river bed. more serious and the representatives of the agriculturists stated that they could not continue the harvest work at such a high rate of wages. They, therefore, demanded a 20 per cent reduction of wages (i. e. about 3 lira 50 centesimi). All attempts at conciliation having failed, including that made by the Ministry of Corporations, the National Fascist Federation of Agriculturists brought the question before the Industrial Court and wread that new and the condiquestion before the industrial Court and urged that new and fair condi-tions of labor should be established according to the terms of Section 16 of the Act of 3 April, 1917, and Section 71 of the regulation in en-forcement of the act in question.

"The point of view put forward by the agriculturists was that the agriculturists was that the agriculturists' request was not based on the general crisis which was affecting all production as a result of the rise in value of the lira, which crisis was stready apparent in March when the agreement was drawn up, but that there was now an exceptional crisis peculiar to the rice industry, where, as had been shown by market indications, prices had decreased and were still decreasing much more rapidly than the prices of other goods.

Court Orders Small Reduction The advocate of the Fascist Cor-poration of Trade Unions endeavored to show that the change in market by the workers, whose representa-tives had already, in the previous at-tempts at conciliation, accepted an equivalent wage reduction."

president of Connecticut Agricultural College, here today prior to the opening of the Connecticut Institution for its forty-seventh year.

"Modern agriculture demands a high standard of managerial ability and of specialized knowledge. In no field of human endeavor has greater progress been recently made in the application of scientific facts to an established vocation.

"The successful farmers of the future will, in increasing numbers, be recruited from the ranks of collegetrained men," continued Dr. Beach. "Boys who have an inherent love of the soil may be assured that in successful farming they will find the returns on invested brains and capital as certain and as full as if applied to other industries.

as certain and as full as if applied to other industries.

"Good roads, the automobile, radio, modern equipment—the extension to the farm of most of the comforts and advantages of the city—have removed from farm life the isolation and drudgery once associated with agriculture. Hard work remains—but hard work is an accompaniment to success in any field of endeavor.

"No one need hesitate to advise the young man interested in farming to attend an agricultural college and prepare himself for a life on the soil.

and prepare himself for a life on the soil.

"The number of salaried positions open to agricultural college graduates is staddly increasing. The multitudinous industries that serve agriculture—farm supply houses, manufacturies, the feed and fertilizr industries, railroads, banks, miltiplants, the farm press, to mention just a few of them—absorb a vast number of technically trained men. State and government service, teaching research agencies—these offer another wide field to graduates from agricultural colleges. Stand for Strict Adherence to Constitution Believed to Indicate Attitude

Special from Monitor Bureau NEW YORK, Sept. 19-The with drawal of William G. McAdoo as a Democratic presidential candidate is seen by politicians of both parties here as a move on the part of Mr. McAdoo to continue a campaign against the candidacy of Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York. The consensus is that Mr. McAdoo be-lieves he can wage more effective resistance as a party leader than as candidate, and in getting out of the race expects to retain what fol lowing he can command to keep up his fight against Tammany and its anti-prohibition candidate.

Wants Law Enforcement What is regarded here as one of the most conspicuous sentences in Mr. McAdoo's letter of withdrawal, sent to George F. Milton, publisher of the Chattanooga (Tenn.) Times was the following:

"My chief concern is the supremacy of Democratic principles, for these mean the preservation, unimpaired of the Constitution of the United States, the suppression of nullification and the enforcement of law, without which stable government is impossible, and without which the blessings of liberty will disappear."

This is seen as a direct reference to the candidacy of Governor Smith, who is backed by Tammany Hall and whose political career has been dotted with attacks on the prohibition law. Mr. McAdoo, it was declared, realizes that the Democratic Party is without experienced national lead and that it has no candidate except Governor Smith, who, while appearing strong in New York, has much to do before he can extend his strength to the western and south-

NEW YORK, Sept, 19 (A)-The New York Sun today quotes William Gibbs McAdoo and Edwin T. Meredith of Des Moines, Ia., one of McAdoo's lieutenants in the 1924 national Democratic convention, as saying that their simultaneous pres-ence here has no political signifi-cance. Mr. McAdoo said: "For all I knew, Mr. McAdoo said: For all I knew, Mr. Meredith might as well have been in Iowa." Mr. Meredith was quoted as saying: "I did not know Mr. McAdoo was ip the city. I am here on business and do not expect to see him at all."

In some way the small feathered visitor found its way into the dark attic and unable to again locate the place of entrance became a prisoner.

After a stay of a day or two the flocks of mates with which it had arrived hopped off from the top of a tall poplar on another lap of their journey to the North—that is, all of them hopped off with the exception of one that went with the departing travelers only as far as the top of the tall poplar and after watching them leave returned to a small tree on the sunny side of the courthouse, where it sat with dejected mien.

this maneuver as flock after flock of the waxwings arrived and took their departure. The only change in its demeanor noticed by observers during the time was when it sud-denly lost its despondent attitude and became very busy making flight after flight to the top of the court-house and spent the time between trips busily hopping around in the trees and on the courthouse grounds.

Soon after the trap door thrown open and the mystery of the bird's actions solved. Examination of the attic revealed that the faithful male bird had kept its mate alive by feeding it with small seeds and other bird food that it put through a small opening in the wall during he imprisonment.

After the prisoner's release the pair spent several days on the court-house grounds apparently well enough satisfied with their surroundings to make Rupert their future home. Then another flock of their kind arrived and the wander-lust must have seized the two, for Houses which have been approved by the director of the Union ecome the homes for the girls. The rooms are rented by the Students' Union at a minimum cost from the householders who are required to furnish matrons.

The purpose of the Students' Union, as explained by Miss Osborne, the resident director, is to provide a comfortable home-like environment and cultural surfoundings for girls who come to Boston to study art, music, or one of the professions.

Many of them, she says, attend the schools of Boston for four years without having the opportunity to enter a refined Boston home and without meeting many of the people who give the city its cultural standing. "WAKEFIELD ON THE GATINEAU"

Paintings at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto

Toronto, Ont. Special Correspondence N THE art section of the Cana dian National Exhibition, now being held in Toronto, are British, French, Belgian and Canadian paintings; British and Canadian sculpture, international graphic and sparkle, sunlight and color. The figure study. "Comfort" by Rosalie applied art, and a salon of photography. Of the imported pictures the French and Belgian display, while French and Belgian display, while small in numbers, reaches a more consistently high standard than the British. The Canadian work suffers little by comparison with the aggregate foreign collection.

Toronto already possesses a very fine Lucien Simon, and it enjoys his two present exhibits, "La Chapelle de Penhors" and "La Batteuse." In the former a number of pessant the former a number of peasant women and children in Breton garb are grouped in a primitive chapel, under a sloping wooden roof, in slants of brilliant sunlight. In La Balleuse, which has more animation and movement, the scene is enacted in somber and mysterious lighting. Both have a quality of genuinesness, naturalness and spontaneity and no traceable relationship to recent esthetic theorizing.

The "Cliff at Etretat, Normandy Coast," by Frans Galliard, a Belgian, is very impressive with its castellar structure lit obliquely by the early morning sun; the foreground being the jumbled deck of a by fishing schooner with its sails roughly clewed up, cordage and junk strewn clewed up, cordage and junk strewn on the deck; and a delicate-tracery of rigging and blocks against the cliff and sky. It has the quality of great decorative design without departure from essential fact.

In pastoral mood are the land-scapes of Louis Jourdan. "Les Meules en Dombes" and "Meules au Soleil" have a big simplicity about them. One enjoys these generalized broadly one enjoys these generalized, broadly treated haycocks and trees seen under conditions of checkered, late afternoon sun; and one remembers, without regret, the dogged laboratory series, by Monet, of haystacks under successive phases of the sun's prog-Martin, whose four canvases show the charistic pointilist method of the 60's; and impress us once more with the truth of the gospel of sunlight preached by Monet and his friends. Martin's work, "La Campana, depart des Volles," is a well-composed har-bor with sailboats, ashore and afloat, the whole vibrant in sunny atmos-

The graphic force of these drawings is unequaled in any department of the exhibition.

The British section covers a wide and diverse field of esthetic tendencles. The modern Primitive is here; cles. The modern Primitive is here; and, near by, is the naturalistic painter of the obviously picturesque. The Italian tradition is maintained by Grant Proctor's "Mischievous Boy" — a little reminiscent of Botticelli. The Whistler tradition—but a little more stodgy—is seen in Walter Greaves' "Tinnie in Green Dress." The evolution of the art of Laura Knight is rather puzzling, and permembers her brilliant Carnegie Institute third prize picture, "The Green Feather," with some regret. This freely painted, luscious, vibrant and highly colorful canvas has been succeeded by a series of works which are becoming drier, more rigid and and, near by, is the naturalistic painter of the obviously picturesque. The Italian tradition is maintained sparkle, sunlight and color. The figure study, "Comfort," by Rosalie Elmslie, is structurally sound but its color and general flavor strikes a decadent note. Harry Watson's cool gray stream scene, with gray rocks and pearly water, in semi-tione with occasional flashes of sunlight, is refreshing; yet one reflects that the mentality underlying his work never reaches a deeply thoughtful mood, never stirs so profound an emotion as, say, a canvas by D. Y. Cameron. Here is skill and a masterful grip of facts relating to values and to composition; a fine sense "en plein air," of the effect and relative plein air," of the effect and relative importance of the human figure (which is never made too dominant); but there is not that haunting thought of "other world" which was evoked by Cotman, Girtin, Turner and Richard Wilson, of bygone days, and is re-echoed by D. Y. Cameron and Wilson Steer today.

The canvas of Alexander Jamieson, Waston Turville, has great delicacy

The canvas of Alexander Jamieson, Waston Turville, has great delicacy and charm; and recalls the grace of Childe Hassam's "The Church, Old Lyme." Alfred J. Munnings' Royal Carriage exhibits his accustomed skill in the treatment of things causating Hare standing in the skill in the treatment of things equestrian. Here, standing in the glaring sun of a spacious English landscape under a cloud-strewn and well handled sky, are all the king's horses and all the king's men. But, somehow, the thing is not visualized in a big way; and it is too literal, photographic.

The Canadian paintings are selected from the exhibitions that have taken place during the last year or so, and therefore maintain a high standard. The landscapes predominate. They reveal the fact that quasi-English or Dutch pastorals have had their day. The sterner features of this northern land are the theme today; and sometimes their native Impressionists is carried on by Henri severity does not satisfy the Pluto- canvas, nian mood of the artist who endows the scene with a gargantuan and grotesque quality which perhaps indicates his process of self-expres-

Frank Carmichael's "Northern Village" is an example of subject chosen for its barren bleakness; and Arthur Lismer's "Pine Island" mournfully waving pine trees against a gleomily undulating sky—is in kindred mood. "The North Country," by G. A. Kulmala—a panorama of lake and rock-bound or wooded coast—has, despite its harsh rocky foreground with blasted tree trunks, a stern beauty and attractiveness And Herbert Palmer's "Wakefield on the Gatineau," with the deciduous trees in their autumn garb amidst the dark masses of pine, a curving river and a fine blaze of sunlight on the further bank, makes a striking record of things typically Canadian. Women wrapped in black shawis and showing only in the darkness of their long narrow faces the gleaming whites of their eyes, village folk going to market on tiny mouse-colored donkeys piled high with green and scarlet saddle-bags, ecclesiastical processions, squalid interiors and illustrations of old native legends, all these are the favorite subjects of Alfredo Gramajo. The striped blankets aglow with color, the cottonwool clouds trailing across a cobalt blue sky, the lean brown Indian folk, wool clouds trailing across a cobait blue sky, the lean brown Indian folk, and the small white hovels cowering at the foot of the red gold mountains, the canvases which Gramajo yearly exhibits at the Selon portray base, things with an intensity of feeling, gaudy coloring and fantastic draw-

The dark-faced, bearded man sitting on the donkey with his right hand held up, a gay-colored fighting cock under his arm, was an interesting subject and the type one often met with in the north.

The legends of the north, which Gramajo has illustrated with a wealth of detail and richness of color rem-iniscent of the work of the early Flemish and Italian masters, are primitive and melancholy. For civilization has not yet invaded the northern provinces of La Rioja, Catamarca, Jujuy and Salta, and life in the small hamlets hidden away under the lee of the bare, red mountains is filled with colorful incidents appealing to an artist of the caliber of the treatment of the sinister element in the theme there is an entire abandonment of the conventions. The abandonment of the conventions. The tempter gigantically emerges from a huge bank of clouds which envelops the whole background. A note of tenderness is struck in the arresting canvas, "Worship," by Marion Long in which the subject of adoration is a bright-eyed little boy whose mother gazes fondly at him. It is a modernization of the theme of the Madonna and Child, and a successful one. Fred S. Geoffrey Grier, whose "Temptation" shows the white-clad figure of the Nazarene in the foreground; but in Collection, after much cogitation the selection was made of Correggio's "Christ Taking Leave of His Mother Before the Passion." This early work, which illustrates a period of 10 years, some of his finest canvases were on view. They were all decorative, patches of glowing color, which on closer inspection proved to be fantastic processions of Indians outlined dark and forbidding against the bright blue sky, or else, as in "The Red Blanket," a native woman in a pink bodice, her knees covered by a vivilly scarlet blanket on which were worked Indian designs and holding in her arms a bullet-headed child wrapped in a dark blue shawl.

fine works of this rare quality should be likely to leave England. The loss esting portrait of "Lord de la Warr" by a follower of Holbein, presented cosimo, "Hylas and the Nymphs," is particularly to be deplored. In the members of the family in member issue of the Connoisseur, the editor, C. Reginald Grundy, scape by Richard Parkes Bonington, mournfully records that these two series from Lord Lyer Chyrchill her mournfully records that those two sales of the Benson and Holford Col-lections illustrate a phenomenon peculiar to the present era; namely, the extinction of great private collec-tions of works of art.

Happily this statement is as yet something of an exaggeration, for there are still noble collections of old masters in private hands in the United Kingdom, but it is lamentably true that these are growing fewer and fewer. With increased taxation resulting from the World War, the old families of Great Britain are being slowly compelled to part with their slowly compelled to part with their art treasures, and no new collections of equal importance are being built up to take their place. The "new rich" do not have the same opportunities—even if they have the inclination—to secure old masters today that the wealthy possessed in the eighteenth century. More and more the great masterpieces of painting are being absorbed by the museums of Europe and America, and this gradual transference of art treasures to wider public use ought not to be a wider public use ought not to be a cause for lamentation but rather that while in the southern Meditertury A. D.—Professor Strzygowski nember that in it he maintains a ranean lands art from its cave-dwelling beginnings was linked with representation, in the northern lands graphic art was evolved from handicrafts and assumed abstract or symbolical forms. Always a champion of northern art, Professor Strzygowski in his new essay reveals how much Europe owes to the art activities of the owes to the art activities of the morthern races. Accustomed as we are to the idea that the art of the Mediterranean countries is entirely southern, we may find it difficult to believe that it is to a large extent of northern origin. But Professor Strayzowski points out that in the Strzygowski points out that in the case of Greece even, a northern people influenced an art which till then had been dominated by Egypt, Mesopotamia and Crete. "A characteristic of this northern art, as op-posed to that of the south," he says, "is the absence of figures, due to re-ligious laws against the worship of images." Taking the sinuous S-curve as the characteristic Nordic line, the professor shows it to be present in early Indian reliefs while it is completely absent in a typical Egyptian statue, which stands stiffly it is completely absent in a typical Egyptian statue, which stands stiffly at attention with no trace of the softening Nordic line. Therefore it is argued that the Indian sculpture, while southern in so far as it representations. is argued that the Indian sculpture, while southern in so far as it represents a human figure, betrays north-

He became Lieutenant-General Grand Falconer of France, took part in the siege of Gibraltar, and subsequently accompanied.

As a contrast with the art of the southern peninsula of Europe when invaded by a northern people, the professor takes an example from India which, he declares, forsook its original art forms to a greater degree than Greece when the Aryans found their way there. Reproducing the well-known squatting figure of directs attention to the manner in which, in order to achieve a desired symmetry, "the sweep of the arms in front has been extended, and the chest has been narrowed to a tri-angular shape. Instead of a rectangular frame as in the Greek relief, a circle is set at the back of the shoulders, a device which seems to round off the flowing Indian con-

In Indian art, it is argued, the In Indian art, it is argued, the Nordic line is more conspicuous in the human figure than in Greek. To Europeans, it is admitted, Indian art seems exthetically inferior because these soft-bodied figures, rounded and bent as if made of rubber, are not anatomically correct according to our ideas. But this seeming incorrectness is the result, according to Strzygowski, of the dominating influence on the sculptor of the Nordic line.

For his final comparison the pro-fessor takes the early eighth century Greek fresco in the castle of Kusir Amra in Syria and the Indian wall painting discovered by Sir Aurel Stein in a remote corner of and beauty of line which, in the Indian painting, are brought to a high degree of perfection.

This was true; and they carefully crossed the bridge and went on through that orchard which a greatgrandfather of theirs had so carefully set out on one far-off April day. They spied two robins' nests among the branches, and Jack's sharp eyes picked out another with a bluebird on the edge of it. The robins gave them cheery greetings. It was plain they were not to lack for neighbors.

The children passed in front of the door, feeling rather strange. How many years since it had last been opened, no one of them knew. Then Jack gave it a little push and they all stole in. The room in which they found themselves must have been the kitchen. Over by the many-paned little window was a small table of hewn boards built into the wall, like a shelf. There were homemade chairs, a little three-legged stool and a long cupboard built across one corner.

The tendency to professionalism was never so great as now, because was never so great as now, occause never before has the average of skill been as high, never before have so many people almost devoid of special insight and individual conviction possessed the skill to write fluently and entertainingly. There are certainly more men and women in the world today who can write fairly good verse than ever before since men began to write verse at all; and the number of those who write readable prose is even greater. This general diffusion of the skill which comes from culture rather than from natural aptitude is admirable for certain purposes, but not free from decided disadvantages. It produces an immense amount of reading matter which is not litera-ture, but which overflows, and, to the eye of the great mass of people, erases the lines which separate the ephemeral from the enduring, the product of mere skill from the result of genuine insight. People read so much in these days of multiplied presses that the literary instinct is largely lost; the sense of style bepresses that the literary instinct is largely lost; the sense of style be-comes dulled to an extreme degree, making it incapable of discerning what is literature and what is mere reading matter, good for the moment perhaps, but good for the moment when skill of this sort is so widely diffused, and commands such large remunerations, writers of genuine power are in constant danger of substituting acquired for original gifts, of making dexterity do the work of individual insight, and of trusting to mere expertness instead of waiting upon genuine inspiration. The man of letters cannot afford to separate himself in association, in sympathy or in thought from the common experiences of common people; he must not only keep in line with his he cannot live far from the heart of today without losing those inspira-tions which are the essence of all great works... ## A Cape of Clouds

The Dutch ship Rumphius is sailing southward between Singapore and Batayia, Java. Last night we looked long at the Southern Cross into which we set our course. It was upright by ten o'clock and a most impressive constellation.

We crossed the equator this afternoon late, and it is now evening. To the west is a long cape of land and respective families with a most exabove that cape of land there is a aggerated and lavish display of eticape of clouds in the sky, dove-gray quette, bowing most profusely to the clouds. Back of this cape of dovegray clouds is a massive sky of burnt orange. The only color in the sky at present is the great sweep of burnt orange and that dull-gray cape of clouds.

The burnt orange has now turned to gold, a deep brilliant gold, like the gold on the Capitol dome in Washington, a burnished gold which looks as if the noonday sun were shining full upon it. Then the cap of dove-gray clouds turns to oldrose, a long, narrow, beautiful strip of rose, running parallel with the darker cape of land below which reaches out into the ocean.

Now the background has turned to old-gold, a dull old-gold such as the Igorotes in the Philippine Islands use in making beautiful necklaces. The sun seems no longer to be shining on this background of gold as it did before, as at noonday, but faintly, as through a screen of mist. The cape of clouds has not changed its posiion. But it has now turned to a coal black, its silhouette gleaming out that dull, old-gold background. Now the fourth development begins. All the ship is watching it and wondering at it. Most of them have not seen the changes that led up to it, but they are drinking in with a sunshade but which adds to the eagerness the marvelous climax. The background is a dull amber. against that dull amber a strange thing is happening. A great fan, with its handle down in the pur-ple waters of the ocean, is spreading itself out over the western sky as if in the hands of a mermaid lying due to less drilling, which means lessened income.

An important factor for a group of independents in Seminole is the inability to sell production, which necessitates large additions to storage.

Some smaller oil companies will probably show increasing profits by reason of larger production. But much of this will be crude oil in storage, which does not become actual dollars until the oil has been sold, since the amount of net realized depends on prices obtained when oil is finally marketed.

To get increased production, such companies have had to drill more wells. Under conditions of larger expenses and substantial portion of production being stored, such companies her borrowing money even though profits reported will show gains.

For California companies the third quarter ought to make a somewhat better showing than the second period. Crude oil prices, are still low, but the gasoline market is much improved.

GOOD BUYING CONTINUES IN LEATHER MART

Average Advance of 2 Per Cent in Prices-Footwear Trade Active

There is considerable activity in all leathers, with an average advance of 2 per cent in the offerings. The up-ward trend of packer hide quotations is responsible for the strength of fin-ished leather. The volume of new business being booked at the factories has broadened the demand and leather buyers are fairly liberal in their se-lection of upper leathers. Better than a seasonal call for oak sole leather is reported. Tannery run of oak backs are listed at 54c to 50c. Top grades of oak bends for the find-ers trade appear in the sales at 72c to 58c. Texas X bloom bends are firm at 80c to as low as 58c. 2 per cent in the offerings. The up-

Sole Leather Strong

At 80c to as low as 58c.

Sole Leather Strong

There is more interest manifested in choice scoured oak backs at 54c. The demand for oak offal is smart enough to keep stocks sold up close to receipts, prices show no material change. Rough scoured double shoulders are attracting buyers at 44 to 42c, also single shoulders at 31c.

Tanners of union sole leather rereport that bookings parsed expectations during the last week end. Packer steers backs sell at 52c. Country hide backs sold readily at 48 to 46c. The choice of cow backs are on a par with steer backs at 52 to 50c.

Union tanned offal, car lots, is moving well. The leading three eastern markets are offering volume lots of offal on the following basis: Single shoulders at 40 to 38c; belies at 28c; Union heads, standard grades, at 18c.

Calfskin tanners report that new bookings lack volume. Prime grades of chrome calf, plump weights, are now quoted at 25 to 48c; with the undergrades listed at 48 to 44c. The lighter weights are slow of sale with top selections offered at 48 to 44c.

Medium grades are 42 to 40c in plain colors or black.

Upper Leather Steady

Side upper leather is moving stead-life. Cautious seasonal buying rules. Prices hold strong. Choice lots of chrome sides are quotted at 36c. A prime medium grade sells at 34c. A lower sort is selling at 25c to 30c.

Chrome colored and black kips are active at 38c to 35c, second grade at 34c to 32c, and cheaper lots at 32c to 30c. Chrome colored and black kips are active at 38c to 35c, second grade at 34c to 32c. And cheaper lots at 32c to 30c.

Chrome colored and black kips are active at 38c to 35c, second grade at 34c to 32c. Combination tannages are not abundant but are obtainable at prices ranging from 28c down. There is a smart demand for elk sides, in the cheaper grades.

Split leather tanners report new business active, with prices firm. Flexible splits are scarce, the better grades being quoted at 26c, plump weights. Lower selections range in price from 2c down to 15c.

Shoe splits are offered at 18c for the top grade. A prime recond sells at 14c, with the lower grades moving at 12c to 10c. Suede splits, in the differing grades, are selling at 14c to 10c.

Patent leather dealers are doing a duplicating basiness of ordinary proportions. Rumors are current of clean-portions from patent sides are of-forced at 56c to 48c.

declining to book new accounts.

So far as is ascertainable, buyers offer no complaints, as the upward swing of quotations seem commensurate with the present rates noted in the leather markets. As a whole the shoe factories throughout the country are well assured of a fall run which may lap over into the activities of 1928.

Last week was marked by degree at the industry, Assembly the industry of the industry, Assembly the industry of the appearance of the industry o the inquiry of the leading railroad, the Pennsylvania, for 300,000 tons, which is 50,000 tons greater than ever inquired for previously by this carrier. It gives hope that the other big lines will order in larger quantities.

The Louisville & Nashville has ordered 61,000 tons from the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company. Formal fall rail buying movement should see 1,500,000 tons under contract. It is hoped that at least 2,000,000 tons will be placed for 1928 delivery.

New inquiries for fabricated structural have fallen off sharply, totaling 15,000 tons, the lowest for several weeks, or since 17,000 tons was the limit of inquiry a month ago. Awards were 30,000 tons, or a trifle below the average. The largest inquiry involves 3000 tons for three bridges for the Tennessee State Highway Commission.

Structural steel awards in the New York district for August were 32,000 tons, according to the Structural Steel Board of Trade, these awards not including Bridges, piers, subway work, etc. They compare with 74,000 tons for July and 32,000 tons for August of last year.

Though the general average rate of operations for the industry is 65 per cent, some of the works of the large companies are going as low as 45 per cent of capacity. The tin plate makers were formerly at 70 per cent, and now the range is 65 to 70 per cent. Makers of steel pipe are at 50 per cent. The rail makers are at 30 per cent. Statistics issued for August by the National Association of Sheet and Tin Plate Manufacturers reveal a neat balance between production and deliveries in sheets, production having been 265,645 tons and shipments 266,713 tons. Sales were considerably below production or 177,647 tons.

Official prices for lead were the same all week at 6c a pound, East St. Louis, and 6.25c New York. Consumers started the week by buying carload lots, and by the middle they were purchasing 200 to 500 tons at a time. For the fourth week in succession prime western slab zinc has been the same at 6%c, East St. Louis. This is $5 a ton above the low of the year. The tin market was dull most of the week.

THE FARMERS LOAN AND TRUST COMPANY AND JAMES H. PERKINS, ESO., TRUSTEES.

Fairfax Harrison, Esq., President of the Mobile & Ohio Railroad Company, has summarized as follows his letter

MOBILE

The main line of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad extends 645 miles from East St. Louis, Illinois, AND OHIO

RAILROAD

The main line of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad extends 645 miles from East St. Louis, Illinois, Company of Mobile, Alabama. At both its northern and southern terminal points, the Company's lines connect with the lines of railroad operated by Southern Railsoay Company. The Company operates a total of 1,161 miles of road in the states of Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama, Southern Railway Company is the beneficial owner of approximately 94% of the $6,016,800 par value stock of the Mobile and Ohio Railroad Company, such 94% being held by Guaranty Trust Company of New York, as trustee, against the issue of an equivalent par amount of Southern Railway Company-Mobile and Ohio Stock Trust Certificates, which entitle the holder to receive in perpetuity 4% per annum on the new value thereof.

PURPOSE

The proceeds of this issue will be used in part to pay, at maturity on December 1, 1927, $7,000,000

First Mortgage 6% Bonds and $2,500,000 St. Louis Division Mortgage 5% Bonds, and to retire $379,000 General Mortgage Bonds due September 1, 1938, and bank indebtedness of $1,000,000 incurred in retiring that amount of First Extension Mortgage 6% Bonds which matured July 1, 1927. The balance of the proceeds will be used to reimburse the Company's trea sury in part for expenditures made prior to July 1, 1927, for additions and betterments to the Company's property.

EARNINGS Gross Income Available Interest Net 1922 -1923 1924 $17.878.005 1,451,945 1,127,968 2.081.070 19,255,063 1,610,519

Net income, after deducting rentals and miscellaneous income charges, averaged over twice the interest charges in the five years and seven months covered by the above table. On bonds issued for refunding purposes, interest charges will be $130,605 per annum less than the interest charges on the bonds which they refund.

The Refunding and Improvement Mortgage will be a direct lien on the 917 miles of road owned in fee, the Company's equipment (subject to the lien of equipment trusts and underlying mortgages), trackage rights and other property comprising substantially all the property owned by the Company. Upon payment of the First Mortgage 6% Bonds and the Si. Louis Division 76 Bonds maturing December 1, 1927, as provided for by this issue, the Refunding and Improvement Mortgage will cover about 909 miles by direct second lien, subject to $17,292,000 underlying bonds. No more of the underlying bonds may be issued. The Company's total ourstanding mortgage indebtedness, upon completion of the present financing and the retirement of the maturing debt thereby provided for, will be less than $34,500 per mile of owned railroad. The Refunding and Improvement Mortgage will authorize a total issue of bonds thereunder not to exceed $75,000,000 until such time as the paid in capital stock shall exceed $25,000,000, after which the authorized issue may equal three times such paid in capital stock. Of the unissued amount, $17,292,000 bonds are reserved to refund existing debt and the remainder is reserved for issue for additions and betterments to the Company's property subsequent to July 1, 1927, under appropriate restrictions.

The Mobile and Ohio Railroad Company has paid dividends on its stock in each year, since 1903. The rate, which was 4% from 1910 to 1922, was increased to 7% in 1923 and 1924, and including extras, to 10% in DIVIDENDS

While the national committee has no supervision over methods for judging local, state and district contests, it hopes that the same attitude toward preliminary singers will be taken by the committees of judges in the several events leading up to the national.

At least once a year, we must pause and wonder where all the radio artists come from. Given 650 awesome total of 32,500 artists of at least fair qualifications. As no sta-tion uses all its artists in any one week, it is safe to say nearly 100,000 artists are available to the radiocasting stations of the country, say KFI officials.

Another question is as intriguing as where they all come from—what as where they all come from—what did these musicians do before stations were built? All the theaters in the country would not furnish them employment. And when it is considered that the theaters are using a capacity list and still leave 100,000 entertainers roaming around free the conundrum grows still more puz-

FRENCH ACE IS CHAMPION AGAIN

Lacoste Wins in Great Tennis Battle With Tilden for U.S. Crown

NEW YORK. Sept. 19—Jean René Lacoste, a modest unassuming youth of Paris. France, is the greatest lawn tennis player of the world today. He proved it on Saturday, when he won one of the greatest matches of the game, perhaps the greatest, in the final round of the forty-sixth annual singles championship of the United States, at Forest Hills Stadhum.

The opponent of the champion was William T. Tiiden 2d, who held the title won by Lacoste for the second year in succession, for the six years preceding 1926. Tilden has been regarded as one of the finest players of all time, and on Saturday he made as hard fight to preserve that reputation as he had ever done in his career. But the old-time ability to get sure points with his cannonball service and powerful drives was now lacking and the younger Frenchman won in straight sets, 11—9, 6—3, 11—9.

Alfred J. Cawse of Staten Island is now the owner of the national veteran singles trophy. He won the title for the rid year in succession, as a curtain raiser for the big event, when he defeated Dr. William H. Rosenbaum, as he did last year, in the final round, though this time the battle was far closer, going to three sets, scored at 7—5, 1—6, 6—2.

No Easy Battle for Lacoste

No Easy Rattle for Lacoste No Easy Battle for Lacoste
It was no easy battle for the young Frenchman, in the big event. Right up to the finish, Tilden was fighting for every point, and often was close to a victory in an important set, only to see the imperturbable Frenchman capture the next point by his steady returns to the finest drives of the tall Philadelphian. It was this ability to handle the wallops that have made Tilden the outstanding figure of the past, on a service ace or a volley never rely, as he has relied in the past, on a service ace or a volley placement to give him the advantage at need. Only when close to defeat was he able to stand up to the pet and put the ball out of the reach of the speeding Lacoste, whose gets of the hardest drives were the finest that have ever been seen in the inclosure.

several thousand more were turned away.

And it was a magnificent spectacle they viewed. Tilden was displaying his finest tennis all the way, with only a few hints of the weakening that has marred his recent performances. Again and again, he would dash shead into a good lead, only to have the relentiess steadiness of the Frenchman gradually wear down the margin. Finally, the reaction would come, and the set would go to the younger player. It was a great player who was fighting to the finish.

who was fighting to the finish.

Tilden Launches Attack

Soon after the start of the match Tilden made it injain that he was ready to make the battle of his career. Lacoste had service, and they won their service games until the score was 2—all. Lacoste was steady, but for the time the power of Tilden's drives prevailed. Tilden then aunched his first bid for victory when he broke through the service of Lacoste to lead at 3—2. But Lacoste merely held to his back-court rally style of play, and wore down the Philadelphian in a long deuce contest to the the score at 3—all. Lacoste won his service game without the loss of a point, but Tilden adopted new tactics in the next and softening his abots to counteract the ability of Lacoste to handle his driving, won a love game on drop shots and soft tosses.

They divided the next pair, and though Tilden led at 30—40 in the next, a long rally in which Tilden put every ounce of skill into his wallops to win the point, the bell always came back to him, until he dropped the point on an error, and lost the next pair for the game. It was the first chance he lost, and showed the tide that was to swamp him. Tilden's service was more effective now, and he was beginning to force errors by Lacoste. He won the next two games on service and two nets off his service was more effective now, and he was beginning to force errors by Lacoste. He won the next two games on service and two nets off his service and a superb volley placement put him at set point, with three chances to take it. Lacoste never faltered, and playing with his shots coming well back into the backcourt, never allowed Tilden to get set for a wallop, and won point after point until the danger was past and the game had been won. This was the second chance for Tilden and with it went some more of his confidence.

The balance of the set found Tilden-

Tilden on Defensive

The balance of the set found Tildenon the defensive. He was fighting, but it was no longer an attack, but an effort to fight off defeat. His service was also lacking its steadiness, and he made many faults on his first service.
These were neutralized by his dashes to the net for volleys, however, and he held the Frenchman from taking the set with these. Each won on service to 9-all, but in the last game it was a struggle to stop the Frenchman. He led at 15-40 with two chances to make set. But-two volleys stopped this, and struggle to stop the Frenchman. He led at 15-40 with two chances to make set. But two volleys stopped this, and a third made it advantage. When Tilden had the chance to take the game he served a double fault. Lacoste was also failing in accuracy under the strain, and finally another pair of volleys gave the game to Tilden. He was unable to maintain the pace and the steady Frenchman took two games on errors in spite of another series of placements from the net by Tilden, and the set was ended.

Tilden dashed into a lead of 3-1 at the start of the second set, with everything working perfectly. Lacoste was apparently resting on his oars and allowed the former champion to take any game that appeared likely to be close. With the fifth game Lacoste suddenly settled down to display his attacking power with renewed force. Outvolleying Tilden in the rallies, the champion showed an offense that swept the American from his net play and, with Lacoste able to steady whenever the power of Tilden's strokes forced defensive play, he won five games in a row for the set. Tilleden was once more relying on his fast service to stem the tide, but the fastest cannonballs were returned with ease and only an occasional volley saved a point.

It was the third set that was really ease and only an occasional volley saved a point.

It was the third set that was really the greatest battle. Tilden was now showing his finest tennis, and every stroke was the last effort of a master. He won four of the first five games, only dropping his service game on the third, after deuce had been called several times. He was handling the service of Lacoste in a much more skillful way, and broke through it in succession three times.

A backcourt duel on the next went to Lacoste, and though Tilden brough his score to 5—2 on another series of brilliant placements, they were of the soft-shot variety, as if Tilden despaired of succeeding with his harder shots. His activity was also showing signs of slowing up. He dropped the next with only a pretense of activity, and with Lacoste still sending back the cannonballs with ease, many for placements, the tide set the other way. Tilden got to set point, but weakened so badly that he served one of his rare double faults, and the chance was gone. Tilden led at 15-30 in the next, but Lacoste adopted net tactics, and a bunch of errors gave him the game. Lacoste eased off to put Tilden shead once more, but the respite was momentary, as he took the next two with his most vigorous efforts, in spite of everything that Tilden could bring against him. Tilden was twice at game point, but the ensuing rally would go to Lacoste, on a crafty return to the backhand of Tilden that was too low to be handled effectively.

Greatest Struggle

coste broke through in the next but Tilden was again effective with his wallops for placements and tied the wallops for placements and tied the score once more.

The end, however, was at hand. Lacoste went after Tilden's service with his finest display of skill in the match, and Tilden had to concede the game after a strenuous series of rallies that ended with three perfect placements from backcourt by Lacoste that passed the racquet of Tilden by inch margins. Deuce was called four times in this game. Then Tilden sent the service of Lacoste out three times in a row, and the match was at last at an end. The point score and stroke analysis:

Greatest Struggle

The next game was the greatest struggle of the match. Lacoste was plainly set for victory. Rally after rally went to one side of the net, and the next balanced it. Lacoste reached match point first at 40—30, but Tilden forced an error. Tilden netted his next, for another match point, but Lacoste was also unable to get the ball over on the crucial point. The crowd was too excited to move and a stillness hung over the stadium. Tilden in turn took the advantage, only to lose it, three times in succession, but a final volley gave him the game and the danger was removed for the moment.

The next pair were divided, according to service, with both contenders inclined to ease off after their endeavors in the fourteenth game. Lacoste broke through in the next but Tilden was again effective with bis

Two more victories for the New York Yankees and they will establish a new record for the American League, that of winning more than 105 games, a mark that the Boston Red Sox set up in the season of 1912 by taking two games, Saturday, and two more Sunday against the Chicago White Sox, the league-leaders brought their total of victories to 104 with 42 defeats. They are practically certain to be the first American League tent to finish with an average above .700.

The struggle for third place between Washington and Detroit still waxes warm and interesting, however. The Senators are only one-half a game in front of the Tigers. However, with all the games between Washington and Detroit over, fan have not any interesting series between the two to look forward to. It is interesting to note that the two clubs won II aplece in dual contests this season, showing how well matched they are.

As in the Ntional League, there is practically no chance of any second division team getting into the first division before the season.

Eight times in one week, Chicago and Pittsburgh alternated for the lead, and finally Pittsburgh took it and has held it ever since. The Giants have hitting power; but they do not have the same quality of pitching that their chief rivals have got. Therefore, it is exceedingly doubtful if John J. A new member of the invading team from the Orient made his first appearance in the lineup of the Armyin-India four, when Lieut. Humphrey P. Guinness was placed at back, with Maj. Eric G. Atkinson, the former holder of that position, moving forward to No. 3, while the forwards were the same as in the last international game, Capt. Richard George, at No. 1, and Capt. John P. Dening at No. 2.

British Slow to Start

Against them were pitted A. C. Schwartz, No. 1, the two Hoppings, with the son, E. A. S. Hopping at No. 2, and his father, Earle W. Hopping playing No. 3, while the back was the famous English and Argentine player, John A. E. Traill, who is now becoming acclimatized to American polo as well.

As in their previous appearances, the British officers were a triffe slow in going into their scoring stride, and the first half of the game found the Eastcott team in the lead until well the Eastcott team in the lead until well the form well the player, and strength of the game found the Eastcott team in the lead until well the Eastcott team in the lead until well the form well and the first half of the game found the first half of the game found the Eastcott team in the lead until well the form well the services of the game found the first half of the game found the first part of the game found the first half of the game found the first half of the game found the first half of the game found the f the British officers were a trifle slow in going into their scoring stride, and the first half of the game found the Eastcott team in the lead until well leaders by a neat backhander. But before any more scores could be made the final bell rang, ending the rally.

The third game of the open championship, between the United States Army team and the Meadowbrook
Ramblers, will be played today instead of Tuesday, on Cochrane Field, Meadowbrook. The summary:

otherwise.

In the earlier periods the British were decidedly inferior in their pony strength, being frequently outridden and outmaneuvered by their opponents, but this was reversed in the latter half, and the ponies from India settled definitely the question of supremery. settled definitely the question of supremacy.

Each team scored a goal in the first chukker, with Captain George making the first goal from an angle, and E. W. Hopping shot a ball from a throwin so truly that the shot went through from an acute angle.

They divided a goal apiece at the start of the second, with Trail the first to launch an attack which was sent in by Schwartz on a drive close to the goal by the Englishman. Then Atkinson took the ball from Traili and Atkinson took the ball from Trail and went through the opposition to score in turn. Combination play Hopping Jr. to Hopping Sr., to Schwartz, added another to the total of Eastcott, leaving them leading at 3 to 2 when the bell rang.

The third chukker was also divided, when Guinness stopped an attack, and his return went to George, and the latter dashed down the field for a goal, with a combination between Traill and Hopping Sr., giving the former an easy shot.

The British tied the score with the only goal in the fourth chukker, with a free shot by Atkinson on a foul by Schwartz.

Up to this time the play was even, but the next two chukkers settled the game. Dening scored two goals in the fifth, with the first coming on a long drive by Guinness, who was filling the back position like a veteran, followed by a 50-yard smash by Dening. Then another attack got past Traill, and Dening walloped another in.

The sixth went 2 to 1 to the British, with Traill scoring on individual dash, and George and Guinness each sending the ball through, with the latter displaying Milburn tactics by riding off young Hopping and then getting away to make the final shot on a pass from George.

Three more went to the visitors in the last two chukkers, with George, in the seventh, and Guinness, again riding off young Hopping, and Dening, on an angle shot, scoring in the final chukker. The summary:

Point Field yesterday was as follows: Sands Point, W. Averill Harriman, Sands Foint, W. Averill Harriman, Thomas Hitchcock Jr., J. Cheever Cowdin and Louis E. Stoddard; Mag-pies, Morgan Belmont, Gerald Bald-ing, J. Watson Webb and Devereux Milburn. This afforded an interesting Milburn. This afforded an interesting test of the comparative value of Hitchcock and Milburn, the outstanding figures of the American team in the recent international match.

Hitchcock emerged victor in the test, but this was in part due to the play of the associates of Milburn on the Magpies. Young Balding, the English player, was especially off in scor-ing ability, and Morgan Belmont was unable to get into scoring mood until the very end of the game, when the lead of Sands Point was too great to be overcome. This left the burden of scoring for the Magpies on J. Watson Webb, and the left-hander nobly bore Webb, and the left-hander nobly bore the brunt, making five of the goals for his team. Milburn was kept so busy warding off the attacks of Hitch-cock and Harriman, who was display-ing the best polo he has shown this season, that he was unable to indulge in his usual attacks.

Neither Scores Early

Neither Scores Early
Neither team was able to score in the earlier part of the first chukker, with Milburn halting the many rushes of Hitchcock without damage, until the bell rang, when a rush by Cowdin the entire length of the field gave him a finely driven goal. But Webb more than balanced the account in the secthe when his fast pony. Wrack-em-up. than balanced the account in the secont, when his fast pony, Wrack-em-up, carried him down the field too fast for Louis Stoddard to intercept and the left hander slapped a ball in from his near-side. A similar rush from the throw-in gave him a second score, but soon afterward a foul gave Hitchcock a free shot, which went true and tied the score. The third chukker was Hitchcock's as he followed up a drive by Stoddard that went just outside the posts, by taking the ball from a scrimmage that resulted from the drive out, and scoring on two long drives.

scrimmage that resulted from the drive out, and scoring on two long drives. Later he added another, all by himself, from close to midfield.

The fourth chukker found Milburn effective in holding off Hitchcock, but this allowed Harriman to get free, and he obtained a goal late in the chukker, on a drive from the sideboards. This placed Sands Point ahead at 5 to 2 at half titme.

How OLD IS THE WANT AD?

How Old Is the Want Ad?

Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier: How old is the "want ad"?
The Savannah Morning News quotes a London paper, "A Collection for Improvement of Husbandry and Trade," as carrying this "want ad,"
Dec. 13, 1695:

"A commander of a very good merchant ship wants an apprentice that bath his Pen well and understands Arithmetick to assist him in the keeping of Books and doing Business, and hath Friends who will be bound for his true and faithful Service during his Apprenticeship."

The commander's idea was imitated. No doubt of that. Whether the commander found his apprentice is not of record, but the consistent user of the little "want ad," knows that it is one messenger that holds a high record as a "go-getter."

Baltimore Sun: What with tourists rambling at will through the West and even the Nation's President summering in the Black Hills, no doubt remains that that once wild region is not what it used to be. But the clearest proof of the change is that at Ponca City, in bolsterous Oklahoma, the chief Labor Day attraction was the Terrapin Derby, in which 400 land turtles were entered. Decidedly the West is slowing down. But it is only fair to note that out there they can still catch turtles.

Le Nouvellistet Business careers, commerce, finance and industry more than ever demand an intellectual attitude of mind and training. The Americans have grasped this and have adopted the only means of assuring it—study. There is hardly people in the world capable of competing with them in commercial spheres. This is a pointer to our young people and all those who wish to make their mark in business.

British Labor's Financial Policy

NEW financial policy for the British Labor Party is defined in a resolution drawn up by the Executive Committee of this body for discussion at the annual meeting of the organization, which is to be held at Blackpool in the first week of October. British Labor has hitherto been committed to proposals for paying off a substantial portion of the national debt by means of a capital levy, i. e., the confiscation of a portion of the savings of everyone possessed of an income over a stated amount. Responsible leaders of the party have long recognized that such a scheme is impracticable. Their defence of it has been perfunctory. Its continuance upon this program has proved a handicap to electioneering. Voters who might otherwise have supported Labor have been frightened into the capitalist camp.

New proposals for raising money for socialistic schemes have had to be evolved. The plan drawn up is simple. It is to impose at the rate of two shillings in the pound "a special surtax on incomes over £500 a year derived from property and investment." "Broadly," says a Labor memorandum, "this would mean that the new tax would be paid by the same people who would have paid the capital levy in the original form in which it was proposed. Instead of a once-for-all-tax, assessed in proportion to the capital itself, there would be this new annual tax assessed in proportion to the income which the ownership of capital yields. The plan is strongly opposed by both Conservatives and Liberals. The main argument used against it is that it would make capital even dearer than is already the case and thus shut down enterprises on all sides and increase unemployment and poverty among the very workers it is designed to help. It is pointed out that the rate of interest prevailing in Britain before the war has been raised from 3 to 5 per cent already by the operation of the existing tax of 4 shillings in the pound. To increase this tax by 50 per cent, as Labor now proposes, means so large an increase in the cost of finance that only the most prosperous enterprises could hope to survive, and how many of them would remain prosperous when connected undertakings had put up their shutters, is highly problematical. If the proceeds of the tax were to be devoted entirely, either to the reduction of debt or to the promotion of profitable enterprise, there might be something to be set on the other side of the account. The resolution drawn up by the Labor Party's Executive Committee, however, lays down that the objects in view are for "liberating resources for the abolition of taxes on necessaries, for the development of the social servand only thirdly "for reduction of the debt." It is clear, therefore, that the main effect of the proposal must be to place yet another heavy burden upon industry.

That is a consideration to which it may be hoped the British Labor Party will give the grave attention it deserves before committing itself irremediably to a policy liable to prove scarcely less embarrassing than the one it has had the courage to throw aside. There is reassurance in the fact that one untenable scheme is now likely to disappear. Its successor will, in any case, have to be assayed in the fire like gold. It is to the advantage of Labor that the dross should be burnt before the minting of a new policy takes place.

The Welfare of the Whole

THE issue gradually clears, the hue and cry over the action of the Federal Reserve Board in ordering the Chicago Reserve Bank to reduce its discount rate will. subside and the question of who controls the reserve system and for what purpose may become more obvious to the general public. How far the authority of the board goes, it is true, has never been fully established, and there may be an honest doubt whether in the present instance that body has not exceeded its authority. The law states that each of the twelve reserve banks shall establish rates at which commercial paper will be accepted for rediscount. That stipulation was made of each of the banks because it was felt that they could hest determine the necessities of their immediate districts. The law further states, however, that these rates shall be "subject to review and determination" of the Federal Reserve Board. The immediate issue raised is whether in that phrase It was intended that the board could "direct" an individual bank to raise or to lower its rates Back in 1920 when post-war business was moving at a rapid rate and prices were being skyrocketed, the reserve banks were the first to apply the brakes and to check the inflation that then threatened to engulf the country. It is remembered that the Federal Reserve Board was then criticized severely for acting so drastically, but after the tide had been turned and the country was able to view the crisis in its clearer posterior lights, the board was criticized for not acting sooner. Probably in the acuteness of the situation at that time many have learned to forget what happened the year following. That was the time of considerable speculation and it was necessary to check the downward tendency of prices and to get goods moving again. Discount rates which had previously been as high as 7 per cent were gradually reduced until within less time than a year they had been brought down to 41/2 per cent. Furthermore, the very thing which happened in 1927 was but a repetition of what happened in 1921. The Chicago Reserve Bank refused to reduce its rate to the level of the other eleven banks until pressure was brought to bear upon it by the Federal Reserve Board. At that time the formality of an 'order' was avoided, but the issue was just as clear-cut then as it was this year.

The right of the Federal Reserve Board may be questioned under the law, but it would raise no new issue. The only factor which has any serious import at the present time is whether or not the reasons prompting the reduction in the rate were cogent. At this time of the year the harvests begin to move to market. In previous years no inconsiderable proportion of American cotton, grain and other staples, going into exports, have been financed with foreign money. The central banks of Europe are not in a position at this time to finance any considerable proportion of that movement, and if the marketing of the American crops is to be effected without loss to the producers then ample banking credit must be provided and at reasonably low rates. That, frankly, is the motive behind the action of the Federal Reserve Board, and the sooner that fact is realized the sooner will the issue over the discount rates lose its force.

It is the province of the twelve reserve banks to serve their individual districts, but it is the province of the board to see that the whole system serves best the interests of the whole country. If the banks in any district believe they have been improperly supervised by the central body, they have the power to resign from the system in protest. But no member bank is likely to exercise that right if the motive behind the action is determined by the common weal.

A Worth-While Contest

MONSIDERATION of the personnel of the , presidential tickets of the two great parties in 1928 is a fascinating game at the present moment, but must be mere speculation. Factors yet undreamed of may enter the problem before 1928 and cause it to be solved in a way not now to be foreseen, yet discussion of the subject on the basis of present information is not without

It might so happen that the next election would take such a form as to put an end to that, political anomaly known as the Solid South. Perhaps from no partisan factor in Government has the United States suffered more than from this. The South itself, boasting of its solidity, has suffered seriously because its insistence upon casting its vote invariably for the candidate of one party has militated greatly against its influence in the councils of both parties. Democratic managers, figuring the electoral votes of the South as theirs for any candidate, are apt to urge the selection of nominees who will appeal to the political machines of New York, Illinois, and other northern states dominated by city political bosses. On the other hand, in the national councils of the Republican Party, the southern delegates, reflecting as they do on its electoral votes, are only too apt to become purchaseable pawns employed by the politician who will pay most for them.

This year spokesmen of the South in both the Republican and Democratic parties are asserting that the nomination of a Democratic candidate who would appeal most powerfully to the great machine-ridden, wet Democratic electorates of the northern cities would lose certain of the southern states. This opinion is reinforced by those who contend that the nomination of Secretary Hoover especially would inevitably secure for the Republican Party three and perhaps four of the southern commonwealths usually regarded as solidly Democratic. A contest between Governor Smith and Secretary Hoover would make of the South a genuine political fighting ground. It might not result in the breaking of the ancient practice of voting the Democratic ticket no matter who headed it. but very shrewd observers believe that it would. If that should be accomplished it would be a thing of perhaps more advantage to the political future of the United States than even the election of the individual who shattered the tradi-

Of course, neither of these very eminent gentlemen may head his party ticket. Each has innumerable friends and a powerful support, but that very fact assures almost equally powerful opposition. It is interesting, however, to speculate upon what might be the result should the Californian, with his notable record of national service, be opposed to the New Yorker who is serving his fourth term as the Governor of the Empire State.

A Noiseless Steam Shovel

DEGARDING the noise nuisances—an electric steam shovel which makes no more noise than the hum of its motor has been invented. This may seem to be paradoxical but a word of explanation will remove all doubts. The words "steam shovel" convey to the average reader the picture of a gigantic steel or iron contrivance that scoops up great quantities of earth to the accompaniment of shrill whistles, escaping steam, the clanking of chains and the violent "choo-choos" of what is apparently an overburdened and complaining portable steam engine

Such is a steam shovel, and for a full appreciation of what the new invention means to humanity one really feels compelled to describe the relatively noiseless electrically operated shovel as an "electric steam shovel." This latest type of shovel is assisting in the excavation work connected with the construction of the Hudson River Bridge at Fort Lee, and it is rather surprising that the engineers and contractors have found that operations "could proceed with greater efficiency and neighborhood co-operation with minimum noise." It is the same old shovel. It noses into the excavation in the same old way. It is the same old steam shovel without the steam and the engine to make the steam. So why not call it an "electric steam shovel" and then everybody will understand just what it is? This may be recorded as another and an important step forward in the movement for the diminution and absorption of noises in the larger cities, a study of which is now under way. The next task should be to solve that greatest of all noisenuisance offenders—the incomparable electric

Women's Activities and the Children

THE announcement that the women's club of a North Dakota town will give a prize of $20 to every boy graduating from the high school who has abstained from the use of tobacco during his four years' course is one of many indications that women's clubs are assuming new responsibilities for boys and girls in their teens. Between founding day nurseries and establishing penny luncheons in the schools, buying children's books for libraries and installing good pictures in classrooms, women's organizations for many years have been actively engaged in projects for the benefit of younger children. Recently there has been a more definite move to extend such activities for the benefit of older boys and girls and young men and women.

The woman's club of a farming community in the middle West has bought a farm to serve as a clubhouse and entertainment center for the young people as well as the adults of that sec-The tenant farmer produces crops which help to carry the expense and the house serves as a theater, a dance hall, or whatever else is wanted in the way of entertainment. No one can doubt that what it is offering to the young people of the community in sociability is contributing toward contentment and willingness to "stay on the farm."

In a southern city the beautiful clubhouse owned by the women, and heretofore used only for the social entertainments of the sons and daughters of members, has been opened on certain evenings for chaperoned dances for the youthful public. This move on the part of the club followed an investigation into the situation regarding public dance halls in the community and is an effort to provide recreation under the best possible conditions for young people who might otherwise find their pleasure under less satisfactory circumstances.

All of the varied activities of the women's clubs for youth are being practically headed up by the establishment of "junior membership, in which young girls are being enrolled in nearly every state. The "juniors" have their own meetings and programs, their own entertainments and community service projects. But in each instance guidance from the adult group is offered through a leader or committee whose object is to train the young girls to step into the club at some future date.

The True Needs of Education

DRESIDENT COOLIDGE, in his recent address at the State College of South Dakota, touched upon certain conditions pertaining to education as now carried on in the United States which command thoughtful attention. While properly evaluating vocational training, and commenting favorably upon the unprecedented development in the courses in natural sciences now offered by many institutions, he made it very clear that important as this kind of education is, it falls far short of meeting mankind's greatest need.

Speaking of the material trend of education he asked, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" of our science and all of our arts will never be the means for the true advancement of our Nation," he said; "will never remove us from the sphere of the superficial and the cynical, will never give us a civilization and a culture ot any worthy and lasting importance unless we are able to see in them the outward manifestation of a spiritual reality. Unless our halls of learning are real temples which are to be approached by our youth in an attitude of reverence, consecrated by worship of the truth, they will all end in a delusion. The information that is acquired in them will simply provide a greater capacity for evil."

President Coolidge's words are not only in full accord with his previous declarations, but they repeat the sentiments of two of his immediate predecessors in the Presidency who have especially emphasized the great need for the people of the United States to lay hold of the spiritual forces. What phase of education can be more important than the gaining of such understanding of the spiritual forces as to make divine power one's daily guide and protection? While education in the sciences, arts, in mathematics and language has received great impetus in recent years, less and less attention has been given, it seems, to the ethical and spiritual. Intellectualism has become dominant to the exclusion of due consideration for mankind's spiritual well-being. This is true not only of higher education, but in the public schools as well.

The present-day curriculum in the public schools is quite devoid of instruction in the Bible or in the fundamentals of religious education. With the thoughtful the queries arise, What will be the outcome of this modern trend? Is spiritual vision being lost to the exaltation of the material and intellectual? The words of the wise man, "Where there is no vision the people perish" are no less true now than when first uttered. The remedying of this situation is a problem which educators may well set themselves to solve, for upon its right solution in no small degree depends the ultimate welfare of present and future generations.

Editorial Notes

It may be safely forecast that what the American Congress will do in its coming session on farm relief, flood control, and the development of the Colorado River, will depend almost entirely upon the unanimity of opinion of groups favoring these projects. Where policies are far anart Congress cannot be blamed if it delays action. Now is the time for differences to be ironed out that definite programs may be presented to the national lawmakers.

And now to that centuries long list of famous old London cries must be added another one. It is the chant of London's cable-layers whose work, a New York paper reports, proceeds to the regularly repeated rhythmic sounds of "Yahmah-Ho! Yahmah-Ho!" The task of these men, so the story goes, is eased through melodious

"We are making men, not money," was the terse reply of George R. Pou, superintendent of North Carolina's state prison, to a politician's complaint that the prison was "not making money." That sounds like good morals.

Remember-it is not so very long since-when an apparently impossible feat was spoken of, the remark was often made that one could no more accomplish it than one could fly?

Two points to be considered in planning a state highway system are the layout and the

Newport—Place of Peace and Silvery Days

HORSE-SHOWS and handsome homes; forts and fleets; leaders of fashion; officers of the United States Army and Navy; young men in training for either branch of the service; and daughters of the summer colony bathing at Bailey's Beach—these are the things the name Newport spells to many. But the Indians named that little city on the island of Rhode Island Aquidneck, recepting Isla of Peace. And to many others, it rests. meaning Isle of Peace. And, to many others, it rests, primarily, in the atmosphere that inspired the name.

Isle of Peace it is, and of strange silvery lights at varying hours of the day, turning earth and sky and sea into that metal, molten; bathing roof and spire and broadside of battleship in gleaming white.

And the people! How courteously they seek an abiding place for those who wish to dwell among them. The taxi driver, taking you to such destination, lets you share in his enthusiasm over the new-found job and all that it promises for his young wife and little baby. The landlady, and the property of the state in making you welcome, leaves you so that, alone, you may glimpse the beauty of the marches, silver-tipped, leading down to silvery waters. And then you really feel that something which must have been in the thoughts of the Indians when they gave expression to the name Aquidneck, Isle of Peace

You battle with the surf that roars with laughter rather than a too great strength; you lie on the warm sand, in the sun or sit in a sheltered rocky nook, book unopened and forgotten, for you must listen to the song of the waves running backward over little pebbly beaches—a song unlike all other songs.

Next day you leave all books at home and walk for miles along the Cliff-walk hearing the crash of waves against the rocks, or the notes of songbirds in the wild rose hedge. On one side is the illimitable Atlantic at the foot of those rugged rocks; on the other perfectly propor-tioned marble steps lead up to velvety lawns beyond which beautiful homes stand, enfolded in the peace of the place. and around the edge of which flowers glow with the vivid colors caught from salty air.

There are beautiful gardens to visit for the tiniest fee, and one little garden down on Bath Road where one may enter when one so desires and rest on marble benches, marveling at rose trees flowering white and red and yellow; and at fuchsia trees, dripping pink and purple beauty

We must always come back to them, for every quality of good that one finds in Pilgrim and Puritan is here inherited, plus something else. Human experiences seem to have been molded here in Newport in less relentless manner than in other sections of New England, finding reflection in a greater gayety and grace of manner. Your friends put into words the pleasant things they think about you. The bus drivers seem never to forget the corner at which you want to alight; bank officials who must find the infinitesimal summer accounts more liabilities than assets, greet you as though you were a majority stockholder. The hairdresser sends you home arms laden is glad, indee with lettuce from her garden, and larkspur, entrancing remembering.

laden with fresh-cut flowers, carefully held in deep preserve jars, that you may buy for a penny, and small boys knock eagerly at your door offering green corn the price of which will take them to a ball game.

Down in the center of the city a man stands on hot days, at his feet a basket filled with cooling water lilies, in his hand the dozen that you may have for some small sum. Just across the street is a bookstore, where the clerks tie up your parcels that you were too lazy to attend to at home, and hand them back to you ready for mailing. The letter carrier, beaming with the pride of achievement, says, "Here's that letter you've been waiting for!"
Librarians remember a quotation you have searched for,

with almost no clue, and present it to you, volume, page and line indicated, on your next visit to their sanctum. The Art Association refreshes your intellect with exhibits of etchings, paintings, pastels—brought from many sec-tions of the country, displayed in their main building and the exquisite Cushing Memorial, and with the gleam and line of bronzes placed in the niches of the outer walls or underneath the trees.

One drives to Fort Adams and sees moats and bastions and old fortifications, and young men in khaki drilling. At the Naval Training Station other men, in blue, are drilling. Or in the white of summer time-arms moving against the blue and silver of the sky and sea, signaling with little squares of brilliant color, and one loses sight of sailors in the making, seeing only a giant bed of portulaca, waving

Ah, Isle of Peace and Silvery Days! possessing all the charms of other New England cities—quiet streets with queer names, Friendship, Farewell, South Baptist, Mary and George and Ann and John; towering elms and copper beeches, thorn bushes softened by blossoms, and innumerable unknown branches, leaning low over high stone walls so that he who walks may read the delicate tracery on the under side of leaves. Low spires of old churches; colonial houses, rich in history; busy Thames Street, quaint and narrow.

One turns from Thames Street on to Long Wharf and so comes again to the music of the water, lapping against old stone steps or slapping against the fishermen's boats, low black masts outlined against the sky as are the lofty masts of the private yachts near by and, in the distance, yards and rigging of the U. S. S. Constellation, the oldest vessel in our navy, come to rest at the edge of this Isle of Peace, although still a commissioned vessel.

Suddenly the tips of her tall masts are touched with light; the housetops of the city, that slopes gently upward on your left, are agleam; a "smiling calmness is silvered o'er the deep"; and drawing a long breath of delight, one is glad, indeed, to be in Newport—or to have it for a remembering.

From the World's Great Capitals—Berlin

THE flag issue which has been occupying the thoughts of the German people ever since the introduction of the Republican colors after the revolution, has once more become the center of discussion owing to the refusal of the hotel managers of Berlin to fly the flag of the German Republic. This is all the stranger when it is considered that the flag of the United States is displayed by them whenever a prominent guest arrives from the United States, and one hotel even flew the Stars and Stripes on Independence Day, while it failed to hoist the Republican flag on the anniversary of the inauguration of the Consti-tution of Weimar, which is about to become the national holiday of the young German Republic. Not a single hotel, in fact, displayed the black, red and gold colors on that day, although they were flying on all government and

This obvious boycott of the German flag has induced the municipal authorities, headed by Dr. Boess, the Mayor of Berlin, and the Prussian Government, to publish a pro-test in which they declare they will not attend any receptions, dinners or other celebrations in a hotel that boycotts the German flag. This dissension broke out practically on the day of the arrival of James Walker, the Mayor of New York, and Dr. Boess actually refused to attend a dinner given by the local American Club in his honor at one of these hotels. The only way out of this dilemma, it is believed, would be the passing of a bill to the effect that the flag of a foreign nation may only be flown if the German flag is hoisted at the same time. This, however, cannot be done until the Reichstag meets again in October.

The refusal of the hotel managers of this city to fly the Republican colors becomes more intelligible when it is considered that still a large portion of the population objects to the new flag. In fact, Germany is split into two camps over this issue. The Nationalists and Monarchists declare that no nation should discard a flag under which it had experienced such brilliant ascent as the Reich had done before 1914 and under which its men had fought so gallantly as the Germans did in the past war. The Republicans, on the other hand, dropped the black, white and red colors because they regarded them as a symbol of German pre-war autocracy and militarism with which they wished

The new flag, in their opinion, symbolizes a change of thought in the German people. The Republicans, more-over, point out that the black, red and gold colors, after all, are not so novel as many would have it, for they were used at the beginning of the last century when a first attempt was made to unite the Reich. The black, white and red flag, on the other hand, they say, is of comparatively recent origin, having been originated by Bismarck who, not knowing what flag to give to the German Empire, composed it, it is said, of the Prussian colors, black and white, and the colors of the Province of Brandenburg, in which Berlin is located, which are red and white.

While the republican-minded people naturally welcomed the black, red and gold colors, it took some time before the mass of politically indifferent persons became accustomed to them, especially since very little was done at first to popularize them. The first man to do this was Chancellor Joseph Wirth, one of the ablest Premiers the young German Republic has had, who decreed that the rew colors should be flown on the Reichstag building whenever Parliament was in session and that it should be shown on the caps of the Reichswehr. The Republican organization, the "Banner Black, Red and Gold," which counts several million members, has also done much to make the new flag better known by carrying it into the smallest villages. The Nationalists and Monarchists, however, still refuse to acknowledge it as the rightful flag of the German Reich and cling to the old flag. Thus the colors black, white and red have now become a symbol of the past régime.

This difference of attitude becomes strikingly evident on festive occasions. If the celebration or commemoration is connected in any way with the old Germany or with the Nationalistic movement, all the adherents of the past will display the black, white and red flag while no black, red and gold flags will be seen. If it is an event which is celebrated by the Republic, the Republicans and the government buildings will fly the Republican flags. Naturally, private business undertakings which cater to the entire population irrespective of their political views, are in a difficult position on such days, for a Republican will not buy at a store which displays the old flag and the true

Nationalist will think twice before frequenting a store or hotel displaying the Republican flag, although it is the official flag of his country. The suggestion has been made that both colors should be dropped and a completely new flag chosen, for instance, three horizontal stripes of blue, white and red. In the meantime, however, with every year that passes, the Republican colors are becoming more firmly rooted and are gaining in popularity.

4 4 4 At a reception given in honor of Mayor Walker and Mrs Walker of New York, Herr von Schubert, head of the Foreign Office and one of Germany's most able diplomatsts, made a short speech which, although it was not to be regarded as a political address, as he said, nevertheless contained a few words on international understanding worth while quoting. "Too much has been said of 'under-standing,'" Herr von Schubert said, "so much, in fact, that this word threatens to become an empty slogan. What is international understanding? It is becoming acquainted with one another, for only by doing so can we learn to inderstand the other man's ways and cares and life.

It was this thought which made him especially grateful for the many visits of prominent Americans to Germany, he added. Herr von Schubert then spoke of how he com-menced his diplomatic career in the United States. It does one good, he declared, to look at Europe from a bird'seye view, as one does when one is staying in the United States. For then all those things which, as long as one is in Europe strike one as separating the nations tinent, become less oppressive. His speech was received with much applause and was translated by Ambassador with much appeared.

The Essex Automobile Company is now erecting an assembly plant here which makes the fifth of its kind to be established in Germany, the other four belonging to the Ford, Chrysler, and General Motors Companies, and the French Citroen factory. Together, with the steadily declining importation duty, these assembly factories are compelling the German automobile industry to increase its efforts in order to compete with American cars. No wonder that under these circumstances the automobile exhibition which usually takes place in the fall and which this year would have been the first international one since the war, has been postponed until next spring.

The Location of Mt. Index

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: In a recent issue of the Monitor a picture of Mt. Index, one of the outstanding peaks of the Cascade Range, in the Puget Sound area, bore a caption: "Mt. Index, an Oregon mountain.'

In the interest of accuracy it should have been stated that this mountain is in the Puget Sound area in the State of Washington, near the cities of Seattle, Everett, Bellingham and Tacoma. Index is one of the well-known mountains of this scenic region, some of the others being Mt. Baker, Mt. Shuksan, Mt. Rainier, Mt. Olympus, etc two great ranges, the Cascade and the Olympic, that hem in Puget Sound, afford those who love snow-capped mountains views which are probably not duplicated on this or any other continent. ### Getting Warmer Each Time To THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

A rhyme for "pint" just sort o' comes natural to one born and reared in the South. Possibly I have an advantage in that my mother encouraged me as a child to give recitations in the true Negro dialect.

In the following verse it is difficult to tell just what the author would do were not the word "pint" available:

When you-all chil'en sees dat piccaninny Don't race an' holler like a 'flyin'-jinny-'Kase she ain't bigge: hardly dan a pint, An' see yo' noses don't git out o' j'int.
